

Tips for Planning an SDG Week Event (March 4 - 8)

Below are questions to consider when developing your Sustainable Development Goals (SDG) Action & Awareness Week event, followed by an event checklist. When you are ready to share your event for promotion through UGC, please submit the form here.

SDG Week Event Planning Considerations

Decide on an event theme:

- Consider SDG/s or SDG-related topics which 1) appeal to a broad audience; 2) are discussed at a level appropriate for undergraduate students from around the world; 3) lend to expertise on your campus or within your community; and 4) have potential for follow-up action or additional learning.
- Consider what knowledge or next steps you would like to impart to your audience.

Decide on your event's format:

- What type of event would you like to host? Options include: a lecture, a panel discussion, an open/topical forum, a service event, or a networking event (and likely others!).
- Will your event be virtual, in-person, or hybrid?
- Who is your intended audience for this event?
- What date and time will work best for your moderator, panelists, and attendees? Consider setting and sharing these details early so that UGC has time to promote your event.
- If hosting a hybrid or virtual event, can your event be recorded so that attendees in different time zones can watch? Recordings will be posted to the UGC website at the conclusion of SDG Week. View a selection of 2021 and 2022 recordings here.
- Does your event need a moderator or facilitator/s? What other organizational roles might be helpful in planning and executing the event?
- Will you need volunteers to help run the event? Could students or student groups collaborate with you in running the event?
- Will you require registration?
 - If so, are their questions your audience could answer in advance to help shape the event's content?

Invite participants:

- Ensure you have diverse perspectives on your topic within your speakers/organizing group. Panelists/organizers can be students, faculty, or staff; can represent different departments or disciplines; and can include members of businesses, non-profits, or governments.
- Advertise your event in a variety of ways to reach the most people. Some options include: your campus calendar, student or department newsletters, social media, professional organizations.
- Consider sending a Save the Date.

Event Checklist

More than 1 month in advance (recommended):

- Confirm event topic, speakers, and organizing team
- Confirm event date, time, and format (in person or virtual; panel, lecture, discussion, workshop, etc)
- If virtual: set up event link & set up registration (if desired); if in-person: confirm location

1 month in advance:

- Clearly outline your event flow and share with panelists/moderators for their input
 - You may want to include speaker biographies, sequence of introductions, and flow of discussion with approximate timing for each portion of the agenda
- Develop event graphics and accompanying text for promotion (use #SDGWeek2023 on social media)
- Promote event to potential attendees

1 Week before:

- Increase marketing of event (use #SDGWeek2023 on social media)
- Confirm date, time, and flow of event with event panelists
- Virtual: confirm who is managing event chat & Q&A

The day of your event:

- Ensure you have at least one additional colleague available for support, whether online or in-person
- Set a reminder to record your session (or set it up to automatically record)
 - Ensure in your opening notes that you let all participants know that the session is being recorded, and their presence at the event is their consent to share their likeness or comments if they are on camera.
- Share a slide (provided by University Global Coalition) about UGC & SDG Week, including disclaimer that recorded events may be shared on UGC's website
- Share a link to the SDG Week survey in the chat
- Post on social media about your event (use #SDGWeek2023)

Follow-up:

- Share your event recording file with UGC (send to universityglobalcoalition@gmail.com)
- Share the link to your recording on UGC's website through social media
- Issue the short SDG Week survey, developed by UGC, to all those who attended and/or registered

Thank you to the following individuals who provided input on this document:

Emily Brew, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

Drew Cutright, Georgia Institute of Technology

Jolynn Shoemaker, University of California, Davis

Questions or suggestions? Contact universityglobalcoalition@gmail.com

Helpful Links:

Submit your SDG Week event for the UGC calendar

View previous SDG Week events for inspiration